

Linking our history to the future: Teramo meets V-MUST.NET

Teramo, 29th and 30th of May 2012.
Archaeological Museum Francesco Savini

Let's imagine together the museum of the future. Virtual museum: a medium to communicate, engage and involve users.

How could we improve the communication in museums?

And how new technologies could help us to discover, to spread and to preserve our cultural heritage?

The Virtual Museum Transnational Network V-MUST.net is working to give answers to these pressing questions, to find the link between our history and the future.

V-MUST.net promotes the cooperation within research institutes, museums and universities to define scientific and technological standards for the Virtual Museum domain. As a Network of Excellence, it gathers the most important experiences in this field to reach its final aims, coordinating research team from 13 countries and over .

The Archaeological Museum Francesco Savini is pleased to meet V-MUST.net during a two day event focused on Digital Heritage resources and capabilities for the research and communication of archaeological information. V-MUST.net participants will explain their projects and ongoing activities as the brand new V-MUST Competence Centre that will bundle the competences of the network core and associated partners and undertake the realisation of Digital Heritage projects.

Cultural Heritage professionals, Museum representatives and companies active in digital heritage are invited to this meeting and to share with the participants the V-MUST goals and initiatives for the Virtual Heritage domain and to establish a national network of connections including a Permanent Observatory of Virtual Museums projects.
